What are the most common issues or concerns customers call about asides from connectivity?

When will fiber be available

What are some of the most frequently asked questions immediately following a new customer's activation for their account and service. And are there any recurring technical problems that customers face especially during setup? Whether that be on our app, our website, with the hardware, or with getting help.

I had no idea we have an app I know we have a website... I think most people have questions with setting up their router especially of they get one after the install so the tech didnt set it up for them. People mainly ask about billing and if our system is auto pay and I explain how all of that works on the post phone call and I make sure to answer all their questions

Are there particular words or phrases customers use frequently when describing their needs or our services? Are there particular words, acronyms, phrases, concepts that customers struggle to understand or often ask for clarification on?

Some people ask the difference between wireless and satellite or they ask about fiber and how that is different. A lot of people use the word bandwidth when talking about speed

Are there specific features or services that customers frequently request or inquire about?

Fiber people are constantly asking when fiber will be available at their location. They also often ask about rental routers

Are there specific marketing promotions or campaigns that customers mention or respond positively to in the past?

They see the signs in their neighborhoods saying we have fiber and to call us.

How do customers typically describe their overall experience with our service? And are there any suggestions or improvements customers frequently recommend?

People have complained that we notify them any time their 12Month agreement renews since many are unaware that the 24 Month agreement renews and wishes they would have gotten an email or something about it. That's the main feedback I get from transfers or cancellations.

What are the main reasons customers give for discontinuing our service?

Moving, they have a different ISP already installed and they claim they have had issues with speed or disconnections with us and just want to cancel and they didnt call us before switching

Do customers often compare our services with competitors? If so, what do they highlight?

Many people say that we are way better than their previous providers sparklight, century link, rise, etc especially if they are in a remote area where we and only a couple other companies are an option for them

What is the typical response time that customers expect, and how satisfied are they with our current response times?

I rarely have a customer complain about our hold times. I would say people are upset if a rep tells them they are going to follow up with them and it takes a few days or if they never get an update at all. whether its for a sprinkler repair tech support etc

What customer experiences or stories could be highlighted in our marketing campaigns? Please keep an ear out for these stories as they are an easy way to create content and a positive image of our brand.

I was doing a 2x2 with a guy who has been a customer of our for years and he said he loved our service and that if we ever need someone to do a commercial for us or something he would happily do that. I can't remember his name but it was one of the 2x2's I've done in the past 3 months I think

Are there any patterns or trends in customer complaints or feedback that you have noticed recently?

People think we trick them with the auto renewal since they aren't notified when their contract is about to renew. A lot of people have been calling about broken sprinklers or yard damage lately

What are the most common issues or concerns customers call about asides from connectivity?

Sprinkler repairs or yard repairs.

What types of customers (e.g., age, occupation, location) seem most satisfied/interested in our services?

I feel like 40 and above and especially those in remote areas with our service that have a good signal are usually very happy with us because who they had before had many issues

Any other comments.

For the questions below I'm not sure what our current marketing focus is besides our fiber. And I am also not aware of any current promotions going on

What are the most common issues or concerns customers call about asides from connectivity?

Cancellation processes and fees, the more upset ones it is directly related to the "auto renewal". Late techs/lack of coordination is probably #2 in my eyes.

What are some of the most frequently asked questions immediately following a new customer's activation for their account and service. And are there any recurring technical problems that customers face especially during setup? Whether that be on our app, our website, with the hardware, or with getting help.

Trouble with the online portal is common but not frequent. It's just not an intuitive portal. It won't show them PDFs for their existing invoices on their account and login is a bit finicky for first time setup or password resets. It is user error most of the time, but there would be ways to make it better.

Are there particular words or phrases customers use frequently when describing their needs or our services? Are there particular words, acronyms, phrases, concepts that customers struggle to understand or often ask for clarification on?

Router vs modem will be a problem until the end of time but we navigate that one pretty well. People will also never stop being confused about municipal fiber, but that is potentially fixable as well. Website schedules don't clearly outline the installation details unless you click the FAQ button. Specific words/phrases I'm drawing a blank on right now, that's just what comes to mind.

Are there specific features or services that customers frequently request or inquire about?

Higher speeds. Everybody wants 100mbps or more. Most cancellations stem from somebody else offering a higher mbps at a comparable rate. We manage to save quite a few of them, but it's hard at times. Network requirements are ever changing. If you have a fairly serious gamer in the home, you aren't happy with 40mbps most of the time.

Are there specific marketing promotions or campaigns that customers mention or respond positively to in the past?

Free installs always go a long way. Easter egg hunt kicks butt every year.

How do customers typically describe their overall experience with our service? And are there any suggestions or improvements customers frequently recommend?

Overall I would say the message is positive. Frequent suggestions would for sure be the online portal. Technician/appointment correspondence and callbacks are the next things that come to mind. Although trumping that, outage notifications are probably the largest frustration I encounter. I thought about it the other day, and we use to be much more open about outages and people were far more appreciative knowing what was going on.

What are the main reasons customers give for discontinuing our service?

Higher speeds at a comparable rate.

Do customers often compare our services with competitors? If so, what do they highlight?

I don't think comparisons actually happen very often. Wireless providers can't even compete with us, we're just better. Century Link is a joke. The big one is SparkLight. "Sparklight I had 200mbps and I always saw it". A lot of it is educating them. I really don't care what speed test shows, but I understand the internet. I can test my fiber right now and I'll maybe see 600, but when we actually use the bandwidth, I've seen it push past 800mbps no problem. This is frequent because people want to "see" what they are paying for and because everyone is wired to use speed test, that becomes law to them. SparkLight's newest modem/router's they include in their packages is also pretty beefy, I looked up the specs. We've had some trouble with new fiber customers where even our Decos don't quite broadcast as strong as what they had before. It's not super frequent but I get really frustrated when people try to say their spark light is working better. It's always fixable, but sometimes it takes time. If we can't isolate it quickly, we will lose them back to spark light and I get incredibly angry when someone wants to use cable instead of fiber. Sometimes it is just the NAT problem too. Sparklight uses dynamic public IPs so people don't have to pay extra for a static to get an acceptable NAT for gaming. Other than these little things with SparkLight vs fiber, I don't see much comparison. I guess StarLink occasionally comes up because people are getting 200-300mbps with them.

What is the typical response time that customers expect, and how satisfied are they with our current response times?

I rarely hear complaints about response time. I got really high praise from a new ammon fiber customer the other day about how quickly they can reach us. May need to tighten down procedures around callbacks and voicemails. If any complaints come up, it's due to them leaving a voicemail and those not getting called back as quickly as they would like. We're reaching a point of growth, I've even heard of people being frustrated we weren't 24/7 yet. Very interesting since other providers aren't even open as long as we are.

What customer experiences or stories could be highlighted in our marketing campaigns? Please keep an ear out for these stories as they are an easy way to create content and a positive image of our brand.

The Ammon Fiber customer. I wish I could remember the name. They were so damn impressed at our follow through on their issues. The customer Jared flew out to in Salmon just to get back online. Kathi Hayes would have good things to say about us I bet.

Are there any patterns or trends in customer complaints or feedback that you have noticed recently?

I have not noticed any trends, other than the common cancellation complaints. I'll just be blunt, our cancellation policies are terrible. We need to prorate the last bill at 30 days from the day they call in. We need a standard of waiving ETFs for customers past 24 months with valid proof of moving out of state, I've authorized a few of those and received very positive feedback. Genuinely, I think improving and streamlining our cancels would make a world of difference. A customer leaving our network can affect our image just as much as an existing customer. The word of mouth method that's always carried our sales success is going to hurt if our cancellation sucks. We don't want to make it EASY to cancel, we want to make it SMOOTH. Cancelling Century Link, minus not being able to reach them, was my best cancel experience I've ever gone through. Politely offered retention, opened a dialogue with me and tried to convince me, but ultimately made the process easy and pain free. As much as I hate century link, they actually made me consider keeping my backup link at my parents house because the experience was so smooth and the rep was so professional and helpful and human. Very unlike most of the calls I've had with Century Link, but that cancellation call made the world of difference that even I would recommend their fiber to people (if they can't get ours of course). I think this is an untapped area of positive feedback we could be getting. We still have to filter it properly and we have to do it intelligently.

What are the most common issues or concerns customers call about besides from connectivity?

Billing since I haven't mentioned that. Guru just needs fixed. And again, appointment verification and callbacks. We've made a lot of corrections to both verifications and customer callbacks, it's not as bad as it was year ago, but we still have work to do in these areas.

What types of customers (e.g., age, occupation, location) seem most satisfied/interested in our services?

It's becoming more well known that fiber is the best, and everyone is starting to want it, I think fiber blankets most everyone these days. I don't know if I can pin this to an age group though. I will see, younger couples to middle aged couples with families and kids still in the household, our wireless is starting to lose out. As I mentioned previously, gamers aren't happy at 40mbps. Gamers aren't happy if their wireless link has a tree in the way causing jitter periodically. As we continue to deploy wave and 6ghz I think that's the future of our wireless success in many cases due to increasing bandwidth needs in households. Latency is also going to become more and more relevant and can be hard to get just right on wireless sometimes. That being said, I don't think there's anything we can't fix on our wireless, minus bandwidth limitations of 5ghz or limitations due to location/LOS.

Any other comments.

Send stuff like this out more often! This really got me thinking about things. We don't have great methods of tracking this kind of data right now so doing these once every couple weeks, people are going to have things fresh on their minds. Additionally, we REALLY need feedback surveys going out to customers like we did through Apollo. Those were one of the best things we ever did for the customer service side of things, and I miss them. It helped us catch areas to train reps on, helped us prevent cancels, and helped us improve processes we maybe didn't even know were a problem. I'll keep a keen eye on these things now that it's top of mind, and I would like to be able to better answer these questions the next time it comes around. Most of what I thought of today are just generic things, and being here as long as I've been here I feel I get blinders sometimes and I'm sure the reps have a much better idea of what we are seeing frequently.
